Sick of the flu? Sickweather app aims to protect you

Boston. An app that monitors social media to track diseases is helping keep Bostonians from the flu.

Flu vaccines were administered at the Boston Health Commission. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

'Tis the season for sneezing, coughing and, let's be honest, a whole lot of gross, green stuff.

The best idea would probably be to avoid any people or places where germs may be running rampant.

Now there's a new website called Sickweather that scans social media for indicators of illness, viewing over two million posts a month to tell users how likely they are to come into contact with a disease. The app maps real-time data on more than 23 different symptoms and illnesses.

Hanna Adeyema, 34, cofounder of a local start-up company, uses Sickweather because she can't afford to be sick.

"I've been lucky several years in a row. I haven't had the flu," said Adeyema.

Sickweather CEO Graham Dodge said the app, which has covered the Boston area since it launched in 2011, helps users take preventive measures during the flu season.

"One user signed up for a sick alert for strep throat. When her son started coming down with a fever, she took him in right away for a throat culture because she saw our alerts," said Dodge.

"She got him antibiotics right away so he could go back to school and she could go back to work. It's not so much about avoidance as it is about having the real-time information."

Dodge estimates that there are about 10,000 Boston users, and that the technology is about 80 to 90 percent accurate. He says it may be more accurate than data provided by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

"The problem in public health is that it takes organizations like the CDC about one to two weeks to gather all the information and make it public in media reports. That's an entire viral life cycle," said Dodge.

"By the time the information is released, it's probably too late to do anything about it. [Sickweather] allows people to get ahead of these outbreaks."

When words like "flu" or "fever" are present in tweets and posts, Sickweather's algorithm can understand that talking about the flu doesn't mean a poster is suffering from influenza.

"Certain kinds of references, like 'Bieber Fever,' have nothing to do with the flu," said Dodge.

As the notorious holiday flu season approaches, Adeyema said she'll keep using the app to avoid areas of Boston where illness has been reported — especially since the CDC recently announced that this year's flu vaccine may not protect against the virus.

"It doesn't hurt to get the vaccine," said Adeyema. "I have to work even if I do get sick."

Region. Nor'easter to slam area with wind and rain; coastal flooding possible

Eastern Massachusetts will be battered. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI / METRO

A Nor'easter is expected to bring between 1.5 to 2.5 inches of rain to eastern Massachusetts starting Tuesday, while high winds and a full moon could lead to coastal floods at high tide, the National Weather Service reports.

"Tides are astronomically high to begin with," said Kim Buttrick, a meteorologist at the Taunton office of the National Weather Service. "Easterly winds are piling up the water along the coasts."

Winds on Monday are expected to be between 20 and 30 miles per hour, with gusts reaching 45 miles per hour. Snow should turn into rain on Tuesday, with snow and rain continuing Wednesday, with up to three inches of snow inland, said Buttrick. DANNY MCDONALD

Burlington bust nets seven johns, one hooker

Burlington detectives busted seven alleged customers and one alleged prostitute in a sting last Friday.

Police posted ads on a website known for hosting classified ads that offer sex for a fee.

While monitoring their own advertisement, police noticed an ad offering sex for money in a Burlington hotel.

Seven men tried to buy sex from an undercover female officer and were consequently arrested. Detectives also contacted the woman who had advertised on the site, made an appointment and arrested her after they had reached an agreement to pay for sex.

The eight suspects were charged with sexual conduct for a fee. They are expected to be arraigned in Woburn. METRO

Mayor: Anti-gang plan to get $3.1 million

Boston is seeking to ratchet down gang violence by placing an anti-gang coordinator at each of the city's 19 housing developments, using a $3.1 million dollar grant from The Boston Foundation, Mayor Marty Walsh said Sunday.

Darrell Rodrigues was tried in a gang-related shooting in 2011.
POOL PHOTO

The money will let the city add more "violence interrupters" — the people who do the outreach — to focus on the city's top 45 gangs, and target "at-risk, proven-risk and high-risk individuals" aged 14 to 24.

The idea — born out of StreetSafe Boston — is to interrupt violence, mediate and resolve conflicts and influence gang members and others in the projects.

StreetSafe Boston focuses its efforts in Bowdoin/Geneva, Morton Street, Norfolk Street, the South End, and Upham's Corner. The program — previously run by The Boston Foundation — is set to expire at the end of the month, after which it will be integrated into the city's youth outreach.

Police look into protest pepper spraying in Hub

State police said Sunday night they're investigating allegations that a state trooper pepper-sprayed a Cambridge man filming police at a demonstration near South Station last Thursday.

Kin Moy, a 24-year-old Cambridge mixed martial arts instructor, said he just wanted to the turn the cameras back on the cops after seeing them film protesters the night a New York grand jury voted not to indict a police officer who put cigarette seller Eric Garner in a chokehold that killed him.

"We have begun an internal investigation into the action seen in the video to determine whether it constitutes a violation of departmental policy," Massachusetts State Police spokesman David Procopio said in an emailed statement.

Moy posted video of the incident on YouTube, garnering more than 3,000 hits Sunday night.

"I didn't get choked out or anything, but I believe it's an example of the problem," Moy said in an interview. "I'd like there to be some accountability and repercussions."

Moy said the spray incapacitated him, temporarily blinding him.

"We take the rights of protesters very seriously, including the right ro report, which is to help ensure that when people are out in the streets demonstrating, they are safe and they're rights are respected," said Matthew Segal, legal director of the ACLU of Massachusetts.

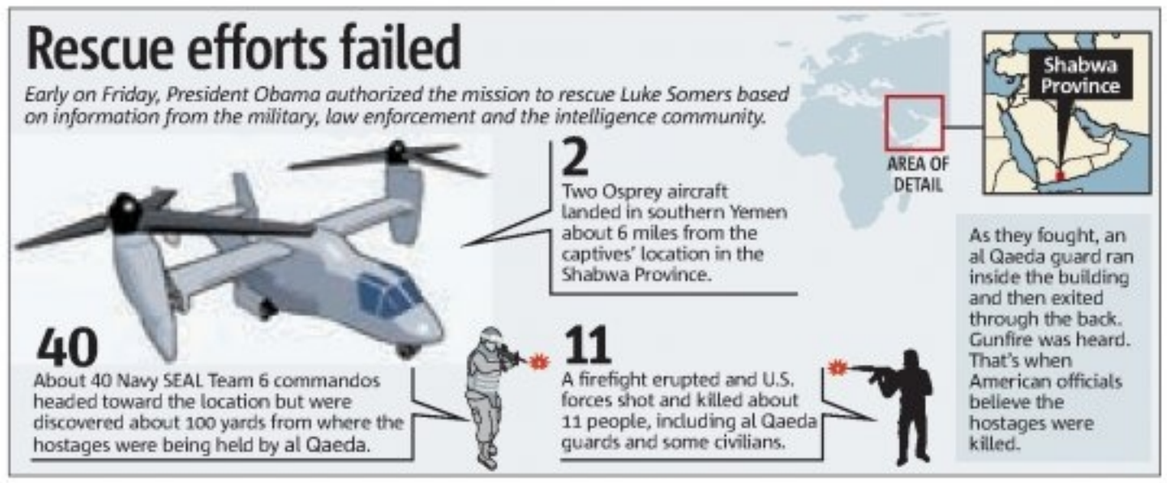
At least 13 killed in failed bid to rescue US hostage



Rescue efforts failed
Early on Friday, President Obama authorized the mission to rescue Luke Somers based on information from the military, law enforcement and the intelligence community.
Shabwa Province
AREA OF DETAIL
Two Osprey aircraft landed in southern Yemen about 6 miles from the captives' location in the Shabwa Province.
40
About 40 Navy SEAL Team 6 commandos headed toward the location but were discovered about 100 yards from where the hostages were being held by al Qaeda.
11
A firefight erupted and U.S. forces shot and killed about 11 people, including al Qaeda guards and some civilians.
As they fought, an al Qaeda guard ran inside the building and then exited through the back. Gunfire was heard. That's when American officials believe the hostages were killed.

More held. At least two more hostages are being held by the group.

A woman, a 10-year-old boy and a local al Qaeda leader were among at least 11 people killed alongside two Western hostages when U.S.-led forces fought Islamist militants in a failed rescue mission in Yemen, residents said on Sunday.

U.S. special forces raided the village of Dafaar in Shabwa province, a militant stronghold in southern Yemen, shortly after midnight on Saturday, killing several members of al Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula (AQAP).

American journalist Luke Somers and South African teacher Pierre Korkie were shot and killed by their captors during the raid intended to free them.

AQAP, formed in 2006 by the merger of the Yemeni and Saudi branches of the network, has for years been seen by Washington as one of the movement's most dangerous branches. BLOOMBERG

Poll: Race relations worse since Obama took office

First black president. In the six years since his election, Obama has addressed race just a handful of times.

President Barack Obama had hoped his historic election would ease race relations, yet a majority of Americans — 53 percent — say the interactions between white and black communities have deteriorated since he took office, according to a new Bloomberg Politics poll.

Those divisions are laid bare in the split reactions to the decisions by two grand juries not to indict white police officers who killed unarmed black men in Ferguson, Missouri, and Staten Island.

Both times, protesters responded with outrage and politicians called for federal investigations. Yet Americans don't think of the cases as a matched set of injustices, the poll found. A majority agreed with the Ferguson decision, while most objected to the conclusion in the Staten Island death, which was captured on video.

The divergent opinions — 52 percent agreed on Ferguson compared with 25 percent who approved of the Staten Island outcome — add to an ongoing discussion that was inflamed when Officer Daniel Pantaleo was seen in the July video putting what appeared to be a chokehold on Eric Garner, a 43-year-old man suspected of selling untaxed cigarettes. Garner could be heard saying, "I can't breathe," and died of a heart attack in what a medical examiner ruled a homicide. BLOOMBERG

The grand jury decision not to charge Pantaleo came just 12 days after a similar panel in Ferguson declined to charge Officer Darren Wilson, who in August shot to death 18-year-old Michael Brown. That altercation was not captured on video, and the prosecutor presented evidence of a physical confrontation between the two men before the fatal shots were fired.

Arrested. Uber car service driver in India suspected of raping passenger

Indian police on Sunday arrested an Uber cab driver suspected of raping a female passenger and said they would take legal action against the U.S. online taxi service for failing to run background checks on him.

The suspect was held in his hometown in Uttar Pradesh, where his car was earlier found abandoned. He will be brought before a New Delhi court on Monday, said Madhur Verma, deputy commissioner with the Delhi police.

Police opened a rape investigation after the 26-year-old woman reported that she had been sexually assaulted and beaten after hailing a ride home with the Uber driver from a social event late Friday in South Delhi.

Verma said the police would take legal action against Uber for violations including a failure to check whether the driver, named as Shiv Kumar Yadav, had a clean police record and the lack of a satellite location device in his car.

Uber said in a statement that it had suspended the driver following the allegations and have provided the authorities with "all relevant details," such as driver, vehicle and trip information. / GETTY IMAGES

Quoted

"Every violation by Uber will be evaluated and we will go for legal recourse."

Verma, saying police would take legal advice before opting to press a criminal or civil case.

Uber has faced critical news coverage over its driver screening in the United States, and has apologized for comments by an executive who suggested "digging up dirt" on journalists investigating the firm.

That has not stopped the San Francisco-based firm from raising investment that values it at $40 billion, reflecting the perceived potential of its expansion into high-growth markets like India. REUTERS

1 Kirk Cameron needs a Christmas miracle

GETTY IMAGES

Former "Growing Pains" star and outspoken evangelical Christian Kirk Cameron learned the hard way that the Internet is basically like quicksand: the more you struggle, the worse it gets. Last month Cameron balked at the abysmal score for his new film, "Saving Christmas," on review aggregator Rotten Tomatoes, so he called his fans to action to improve the score by flooding the site with good reviews. Of course, Rotten Tomatoes doesn't really work that way, but that's beside the point.

What happened instead? Cameron instead encouraged online pranksters to go to town, pushing the film to the No. 1 stop on IMDb's 100 Worst Movies list, determined by user ratings on the film database. Unless he can encourage his fans to start voting down "Birdemic" so its ranking dips below the 1.5 stars "Saving Christmas" currently has, it's an honor he'll hold for awhile now.

2 Mark Wahlberg tries to erase his criminal past

When Mark Wahlberg was 16 years old — before he became Marky Mark and, I'm assuming, hooked up with the Funky Bunch — he was a bit of a bad seed. So bad, in fact, that he was convicted of assault and tried as an adult, serving 45 days in prison. Well, now he'd like all that wiped off his record, according to a petition he's submitted.

Those actions, by the way, involve assaulting a man while attempting to steal beer outside a store and then punching another man in the face. My question is: Where was Donnie Wahlberg?

3 Network tries to put '7th Heaven' reruns back onto the schedule

Back in October, following revelations that "7th Heaven" paterfamilias Stephen Collins had allegedly confessed to molesting young girls, the toxically wholsome family drama was understandably pulled from cable network UP TV's schedule. Well, last month they tried to quietly slip it back in anyway. But fans understandably weren't having it. "We brought the show back because many viewers expressed they could separate allegations against one actor from the fictional series itself. As it turns out they cannot," a statement from the network reads. "We will be taking the show back off the air." Well, that was fast.

Watch Harry Styles and Sir Ian McKellen cuddle

One Direction and "The Hobbit" star Sir Ian McKellen both stopped by "The Graham Norton Show" to basically start a mutual appreciation society. After McKellen recounts the time the boys failed to turn up for a visit to the film series' location of New Zealand, he and Harry Styles get down to expressing their true feelings for one another. "You're amazing," Styles says, to which McKellen coyly replies, "So are you." And then there's some cuddling and it's adorable.

Besties with Gillian Jacobs

Interview. The actress talks about her new film "Life Partners" and about being a young Shakespeare nerd.

Leighton Meester and Gillian Jacobs play best friends who may be drifting apart due to serious romantic relationships in "Life Partners," now streaming on VOD. / MAGNOLIA PICTURES

Gillian Jacobs is happy "Life Partners" exists, as it's a rare breed: a comedy about women, written by women, directed by a woman and produced by women. The film stars her and Leighton Meester as friends so close they're borderline codependent. When Jacobs' character happens into a serious relationship, it threatens to capsize their friendship.

This is a comedy, but one that takes its characters' issues seriously.

There are a lot of aspects of this script that reminded me of myself and my own life and my own friendships. Sometimes the not-so-awesome parts of my personality were reflected in my character. [Laughs] I was like, "Yep, recognize that!" When I read the fight with Adam [Brody's character, who plays her boyfriend], where I show this need to win arguments — no one needed to explain that scene to me. I think the part is the one that's the closest to me that I've ever done.

GILLIAN JACOBS / FILMMAGIC

You do a lot of comedy these days, but you didn't start out in it.

Up until "Community," it was all very serious things. I never did comedy. I'd love to do something like that again. I did a one-day Shakespeare benefit in L.A. It really brought out the Shakespeare nerd in me from childhood.

What was it?

We did an abridged version of "As You Like It." I did Rosalind. I think it's the largest female role in Shakespeare, but you might want to Google that. [Ed. Cleopatra, from "Antony and Cleopatra," has the most lines, with 686, to Rosalind's 677. But Rosalind has the highest percentage in a play.] I was in it as a kid, so I had it all memorized, from back when I was 12. I would sit backstage and mouth along to the dialogue. When you're 12 your brain is like a sponge. I just learned the whole play.

You need to say in interviews that you're dying to do more Shakespeare. Maybe Kenneth Branagh will notice.

Is that how it works? If that's how Hollywood works, that would be awesome. I would just write blog posts all day about the parts I want to play.

Being Britta

Token 'Community' question

Do you have any sense yet how the next season will be different, not only being on Yahoo but without Yvette Nicole Brown?

They don't tell us anything, so I have no clue. I haven't seen a single script or heard anything. The nature of the show is very fluid, so even though we'll miss Yvette dearly — and we miss Donald [Glover] dearly — I think the steady group will continue. We'll feel their absences, but I don't think it will change the dynamic of the show. But that's me speaking without having seen the script, so it could change the dynamic completely, and I could be totally wrong!

How many infusions do I have to get?
Most people receive a series of four infusions.

Extreme hangover: IV infusion edition

Alternative therapy.
A hard night of partying can be erased — if you've got the stomach for it.

It's the time of year for drinking, but all that holiday cheer can leave you less than happy the next day. If you've got a vicious hangover, there is a cure — if you're willing to brave a needle.

Whether dehydrated from drinking too much or just recovering from the flu, the IV therapy trend is spreading throughout the Northeast, with salons providing injectable vitamin concoctions to the Sunday night party crowd.

The practice is much more common on the West Coast, says Ronen Morris, owner of Delete Tattoo Removal and Laser Salon in Boston. Delete provides nutrient infusions that are meant to last between three and six weeks for about $125 a piece.

"It's definitely a West Coast trend," says Morris. "The West Coast tends to favor some of these different types of medical practices, but it's certainly growing exponentially in popularity."

Delete initially started offering the infusions as part of its tattoo removal service, but clients kept coming back because they enjoyed the burst of energy. The salon offers a range of nutrient infusions, which can be tailored to clients' specific desires and are administered by a registered nurse. For instance, marathon runners may choose the Elite Athlete, a combination of B vitamins for a post-workout boost.

For those hoping to lose weight there is the Skinny, a cocktail of B vitamins that rev your metabolism and burn fat. But the most popular of all infusions is the Hangover Helper: magnesium, selenium, zinc, calcium and saline for those feeling the heat after a night of partying.

"I've taken B12 pills, but you just feel it right away," Bella Carneiro, 38, says of nutrient infusions. As a bartender at The Brahmin and the Bell in Hand in Boston, Carneiro says she frequently gets B12 injections. "I always do a B complex shot because it gives me so much energy, and the infusions for hangovers."

But experts caution that if you're relying on such an extreme solution, it might be time to reconsider your lifestyle.

"If you are so debilitated after a night of partying that you actually need intravenous hydration and vitamins, you need to go to the emergency room and get proper treatment for dehydration and vitamin deficiencies that are commonly seen in alcoholism or acute alcohol toxicity," says Dr. Caroline Apovian, the director of Boston Medical Center's Nutrition & Weight Management Center.

Study. Get started living longer by going on the Mediterranean diet

The Mediterranean diet is now scientifically proven to help you live longer by protecting your DNA.

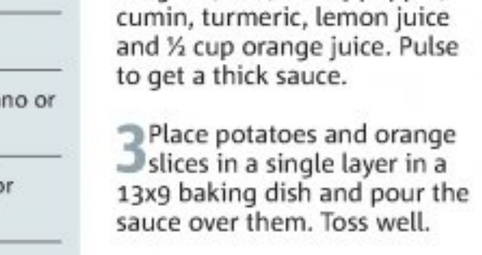
Telomeres are the protective cap (like the plastic at the ends of shoelaces) on chromosomes keeping them from fraying, causing the genetic code they contain to become corrupted. After a food survey of more than 4,600 women, a blood test showed that those who ate what most closely resembled the Mediterranean diet showed significantly longer telomeres — 1.5 years for each notch closer on a nine-point scale.

We asked Aglaia Kremezi, author of the new cookbook "Mediterranean Vegetarian Feasts," to share a recipe to get you started. EVA KIS

The basics

How to eat Mediterranean

- Eat lots of vegetables, fruits, nuts, legumes (peas, beans, lentils), unrefined grains, monounsaturated fats (like olive oil) and fish.
- Drink regular but moderate amounts of alcohol, like a glass of wine with dinner.
- Avoid dairy products, meat and poultry.



Recipe. Roasted potatoes with garlic

ABRAMS BOOKS

Ingredients

- 2/3 cup olive oil
- 4 to 6 cloves minced garlic (to taste)
- 2 tbsp Dijon mustard
- 1 1/2 tbsp dried oregano or thyme, crumbled
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt (or more to taste)
- 2 tsp Maraş pepper or a good pinch of crushed red pepper flakes
- 1 tsp ground cumin
- 1 tsp ground turmeric
- 2 tbsp lemon juice
- 1/2 to 1 cup orange juice, as needed
- 3 lb fingerling potatoes, halved, or any baking potatoes, peeled and cut into 1 1/2-inch cubes
- 2 orange slices
- 3 tsp fresh oregano and/or 5 sprigs of thyme

1 Preheat the oven to 400° F.

2 In a food processor or blender, combine the olive oil, garlic, mustard, dried oregano, salt, Maraş pepper, cumin, turmeric, lemon juice and ½ cup orange juice. Pulse to get a thick sauce.

3 Place potatoes and orange slices in a single layer in a 13x9 baking dish and pour the sauce over them. Toss well.

4 Cover loosely with parchment paper and bake in the lower part of the oven for 40 minutes. Take out, uncover and toss. Potatoes should be bubbly and easily pierced with a fork. Taste and adjust the seasoning. If the pan is dry, add more orange juice.

5 Bake, uncovered, for 20 minutes more or until the potatoes are cooked through, with nicely browned edges. If the potatoes are fully cooked but lack color, place the pan under the broiler for 2 to 3 minutes, until they turn golden brown. Sprinkle with fresh oregano and/or thyme. Serve with a green salad, feta, any aged cheese or grilled halloumi.

Work. Don't let loud co-workers ruin your workday

The average workday is filled with distractions — whether it's because of last-minute email requests, meetings that run overlong or having to deal with inexplicable computer problems.

But perhaps there's nothing more distracting than talkative co-workers — people who either constantly try to engage you in conversation or whose voices you can't help hearing from the next cubicle over. Instead of spending your days being frustrated, author Jeff Michaels offers an alternative.

"I've been stuck in offices where the environment can suck your soul, but it doesn't have to if you don't want it to," Michaels explains. We asked him for his suggestions on how to make working in loud, crowded offices more pleasant.

Have a friendly conversation. "The first thing I would do is literally ask them if they know they are annoying people," says Michaels,

"I've been stuck in offices where the environment can suck your soul, but it doesn't have to if you don't want it to." Michaels

the author of the new book "Please Hug Me — I'm an Office Monkey." Michaels says it's always best to have a direct conversation before going higher up the ladder to your manager or Human Resources. "Realistically, they might not even be aware that there is a problem."

Set some boundaries. And we mean that literally. Do you work by the office water cooler or conference room? It can be annoying to have to stop and chitchat with everyone who comes by. "You can get a couple of plants and literally build your own barrier," Michaels suggests. "Or maybe get a little tiny sign that says 'Silence is Golden' or something more comical."

Utilize the conference room. Do you have to be at your desk all of the time or are there breakout areas or small conference rooms that you can temporarily take over? "Now with laptops and Wi-Fi, it's more possible to literally move around," says Michaels. It's OK to disappear for a bit.

LAKSHMI GANDHI

Block it out

Get headphones

"I'm a big proponent of noise-canceling headphones," says Michaels. "Splurge a bit for that pair of $100 Bose headphones." There are also apps and CDs that solely consist of white noise and stress-reducing music that you can play throughout the day.

Horoscope

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Slow down and make critical decisions based on facts. Think matters through and ferret out information that can help you make a wise choice. It's better to be safe than sorry.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Don't jeopardize your reputation. Stay away from anyone whose ethics or morals are in question. Others will judge you by the company you keep.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Look for a challenge that stimulates your senses and motivates you to do your best. Regardless of what path you take, patience and hard work will be required.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Ask pertinent questions, or someone will offer you a false impression. Choose a reliable friend or relative to give you an honest assessment of your current situation.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Don't be a pushover. Stick to your plan and don't let anyone talk you out of doing something you have your heart set on. Missed opportunities will lead to regrets.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. An increase in professional commitments will keep you busier than usual. Undue stress will cause minor health problems. It's OK to ask for help if you feel overwhelmed.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Dealing with relatives may try your patience. Pick your battles. If you turn a minor disagreement into a major confrontation, everyone will be upset and no one will come out a winner.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Try not to get too frazzled about the changes going on around you. Jumping to conclusions before all the facts are in will add to your distress.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. If you are feeling pressured by someone, cozy up to fun, optimistic friends. Avoid sharing your disappointments with others, and keep your focus positive.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Your patience will be tested. Your peers may feel that they have all the answers. Get your point across without alienating the people you deal with daily if you want to avoid repercussions.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. You'll receive mixed signals from a colleague today. If you are not sure what is expected of you, ask. Speculation on your part will only add to the confusion.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Today is about making money and getting ahead. Take control of your situation. Attend business courses, go for interviews and find a market for your ideas and skills. EUGENIA LAST

Bad cop hurts good cop

I have two relatives who are cops, and over Thanksgiving both were telling us that the district attorneys are all scum — political hacks who don't care at all about law and order, and only care about political maneuvering. I believe them, after seeing the dirty tricks in Ferguson and Staten Island. What's scarier, is both said bad cops are making their job more threatening and dangerous, as more people in society turn against cops. But good cops can't speak out because of the thug frat-boy mentality of police forces. Will no one in government do anything about this? What about media?

Good deed done

The other day I left my wallet on the commuter rail with my credit cards, license and $200 in cash, along with everything else of importance. Just when I was losing hope it would be returned, my doorbell rings while eating dinner. There stood a man holding my wallet fully intact, not a penny missing! I was shocked to say the least. So heres to you Matt! Thank you for reminding us all that there are still good people out there — may good karma come your way!

Re: 'Medical errors affect quarter of state residents' (Metro, Dec. 4) Mighty interesting but it leaves out a core detail. Namely, "which" quarter of state residents? I just don't think in today's world, those errors are randomly distributed. In fact, from my reading and recent past experience as retired at age 83, I guess those errors are most concentrated to reach those least able to deal with them: retired, low-income, etc. I think I see in this a good continuing topic for Boston Metro.

Revs remain ringless, come up short in LA

MLS Cup. New England fell once again in the MLS title round, losing 2-1 in extra time to the Galaxy.

The New England Revolution have come a long way under head coach Jay Heaps, who took over the franchise three years ago after it had suffered through a 5-16-3 campaign.

With a habit of going deep into the postseason during the last decade, Heaps guided the Revs back to the MLS Cup this season. Unfortunately for New England its luck in the MLS championship final remains the same.

The Revolution are still the groomsmen after dropping a Hollywood heartbreaker in Carson, California, on Sunday, losing 2-1 in extra time to the Los Angeles Galaxy. It was the fifth championship title for the Galaxy.

Robbie Keane, the MLS MVP, came through when it mattered for the Galaxy as his 111th-minute goal ultimately made sure the Revs would leave SoCal without American soccer's most-prized hardware.

Keane took a long ball off the foot of Marcelo Sarvas over the top of the defense and hammered it past Revs goaltender Bobby Shuttleworth for the winning strike.

Chris Tierney tallied the lone goal for the Revs, as he put one through the legs of Galaxy keeper Jaime Penedo. Patrick Mullins set up Tierney.

Gyasi Zardes scored the opening goal of the match in the 52nd minute when he pushed the ball past Shuttleworth from in close.

Visit Metro.us to see how the Patriots fared in San Diego on Sunday night.

The Revolution have been to the MLS Cup, the league's championship round, five times in franchise history, but are now 0-5 in the title round. They also lost in 2002, 2005, 2006 and 2007.
